Abbott Duplex
Salisbury
Private

c. 1910

Tucked away along Maryland Avenue, a side street off Camden Avenue, is the two-story, six-bay duplex long associated with the Abbott family. Dating to the early twentieth century, the brick block boasts a pressed, stretcher bond facade and common bond side walls. Distinctive to the Maryland Avenue elevation is an even fenestration of single-pane sash windows and a pair of entrances, all of which are spanned by slightly projecting double rowlock arches. Also distinguishing the front of the duplex is a metal cornice with an egg-and-dart molding. The brick duplex is an unusual architectural form in this residential neighborhood, which is populated by single-family dwellings.

Construction of the duplex is estimated to date around 1910 during the ownership of Merrill M. Abbott, who resided in the two-story frame house standing next door at the corner of Camden and Maryland avenues. Acquiring the corner lot in 1901, Merrill M. Abbott, a carpenter, held onto the property until his death in 1934. In his will Merrill Abbott left the property to his wife Lillie with instructions that the house and duplex pass to their daughter Edith following Lillie's death. Ten years later, Edith G. Abbott left the family properties to her brother and sister, Thomas W. H. Abbott and Maude Abbott Culver. Abbott family ownership of the duplex did not end until 1945.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Abbott duplex is located at 314-316 Maryland Avenue in the Camden Historic District of Salisbury, Wicomico County, Maryland. The two-story, six-bay by two-bay brick duplex faces north.

Built around 1910-20, the two-story duplex has a pressed brick front and seven-course common bond side walls. The walls rise to parapets that disguise the low sloping shed roof.

The north (main) elevation is a symmetrical six-bay facade with a pair of centered doors and flanking single-pane sash windows. The door and window openings are spanned by double rowlock arches that project slightly from the wall surface. The partially glazed front doors are topped by two-light transoms. Sheltering the first floor is a hip roofed porch supported on tapered paneled posts set on brick plinths. A turned baluster railing stretches between the plinths. The second story is marked by a series of four single-pane sash windows topped by double rowlock arches. Stretching across the top of the wall surface is a metal cornice that incorporates a classical egg-and-dart molding.

The side elevations are pierced by pairs of single-pane sash windows on each story, and the openings are spanned by double rowlock arches. Rising through the wall are single flue brick stove chimneys.

The interiors were not seen.
